Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I feel that phone companies already have quite a large enough profit margin to cover any taxes and adding or increasing fees to the consumers is simply a "FLEECING" of the American people. I urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. I am concerned that this proposal could make my current service unaffordable. I make no long distance calls on my cell phone, and it is a prepaid service which I keep for emergencies.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is unfair!

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share. I urge you to reject the proposal to move the USF collection system to a flat-fee.

Keep the USF Fair!

Sincerely,
